About the Author

The Irish-born Edward Quinn (1920 1997) lived and worked on the Côte d Azur since the fifties, where in those days stars, managers, artists and the nobility gathered. Quinn s delicately sensitive photos, shot in Nice, Cannes and Monte Carlo, of celebrities such as Brigitte Bardot, Sophia Loren, Marlon Brando, Somerset Maugham, Aristotle Onassis and many others, originate from this period. His friendship with Picasso began in 1951 and lasted until the artist s death in 1973. During those twenty years an extensive photographic opus evolved around Picasso and included his own contribution which found its expression in numerous exhibitions, books and films. Motivated by his association with Picasso, Quinn concentrated more and more since the sixties on collaborations with a number of artists to which, amongst others, Max Ernst, Alexander Calder, Francis Bacon, Salvador Dalí and David Hockney belonged. A similar intensive association as the one with Picasso bound him since the late eighties to Georg Baselitz. At the beginning of the nineties, Quinn moved to Lake Zurich and lived there, until his death in 1997, with his Swiss wife Gret who continued to supervise the comprehensive Edward Quinn Archive.
